Member

Ezra N. Goodman devotes his practice to cooperative and condominium law, real estate, construction law and leasing. He works out of the firm's New York City office.

Ezra's practice includes the representation of numerous cooperatives, condominium, and rental housing developments.

Ezra's rich and varied experience in these fields spans many years. It encompasses commercial and retail leasing; construction contracts of all scopes and types; major service contracts; and counseling the boards of directors, managers, and owners of the housing developments about governance and all facets of their operations. In the course of his practice, Ezra has developed many forms and procedures for dealing with the problems faced by his clients in ways that are efficient, cost effective, and customized to each client's needs.

Ezra strongly believes that effective legal representation, especially in the housing field, requires him to be proactive rather than reflexive. "I enjoy being an advocate for the good of my clients and not just a mechanic. We helped create the very concept of cooperative housing in New York City, and we are dedicated to promoting and strengthening it in whatever way possible."
